ROOSEVELT'S DENIAL BRINGS OUT PARKER'S REPLY TONIGHT

THE OPPOSITION CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE HAS ACCUSED THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, THROUGH HIS NATIONAL CHAIRMAN, OF BLACKMAILING CORPORATIONS INTO CONTRIBUTING A VAST CAMPAIGN FUND.

The President of the United States has said that his opponent, until lately a Judge of the highest court of a great State, tells what is not true.

The Democratic candidate will reply to him to-night.

The most sensational incident in modern American politics is the letter of President Roosevelt to the public, defending himself from the charge made by Judge Alton B. Parker and other Democratic leaders that through Mr. Cortelyou he had collected vast campaign funds from the trusts by reason of the knowledge Mr. Cortelyou had gained as Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

For the first time in American politics a President of the United States has come out, on the eve of the election, with a personal reply to charges against him.

PRACTICALLY GIVING THE LIE.

For the first time in American politics a President of the United States has deliberately and carefully, in writing and removed from the heat of verbal political debate, accused his principal opponent of

ANDOVER MEETS STRONG RIVAL

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.
ANDOVER, N. H., Nov. 5.—The local academy eleven meets the Andover team to-day. Out of seven games already played against Andover, the local team has succeeded in winning only three. If Lake Umbagog should win today it will make matters even, so next year's battle would be the "rubber."

Andover has always played a grand game here, and this should be no exception to the rule. Last season when the Lawrenceville team was most confident of victory they were whipped, 23 to 0. Although Andover is a better team than the Lawrenceville team, it is about even.

FIRE LOSS TO TWO SECRET SOCIETIES
Fire on the top floor of Buckley's Block, Massachusetts avenue and Norfolk street, yesterday, caused a loss of $1,000. The principal loss was of furnishings in the office of the old fellows and the old men, who met in the building. Several valuable paintings in the room were destroyed.

TECHNOLOGY WILL INSIST ON POLICE REDRESS

President Henry G. Villchott, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, called the students of the institute together in Burlington Hall today and told them of the action taken regarding an investigation of the riot of last Wednesday night between the students and the police. Dr. Villchott says that he will push the investigation as far as it is necessary to secure redress for the students who were brutally treated.

Dr. Villchott said: "Under the authority of the executive committee of the institute I am proceeding to collect the evidence of what took place on Wednesday night. The evidence we propose to place before the Police Commission, and to ask them to take such action as the facts may indicate as just and right. It is not on account of the arrest of the police in carrying out what they supposed to be their instructions, but it is for the unlawful manner in which they carried out these orders, for the arbitrary and, as I think, brutal, method of dealing with students and other persons on the streets, that this proceeding is taken."

Crimsons Determined to Wipe Out Stigma of Their Defeat by Penn.—Dartmouth Men Equally Confident of Victory.

Special to the Boston American.

HARVARD STADIUM, Soldiers Field, Nov. 5.—Whether it will be another upheaval for the Crimson, or whether the fatal ending of the Pennsylvania game was the result of a mistake, will shortly be determined, and the serious subject is responsible for the throngs that are wending their way to the immense stone amphitheatre.

The Dartmouth element, and it is the largest representation that any college has had on the Harvard battlefield this year, expects its team to repeat the glorious victory of last year, and have come the long journey from Hanover to see the feat done.

The legion of Harvard sympathizers came through the openings with more or less misgivings as to the outcome, but stood by the team when it came to putting the team in the lead in the betting, and Harvard ruled a slight favorite, in spite of the Dartmouth confidence that was exhibited everywhere.

TIMILTY IS DISCHARGED

James P. Timilty, foreman of one of the city paving departments, against whom charges of carrying the name of a dead man on the city payroll had been preferred by Paving Superintendent Henry Mackey, was discharged today after a hearing.

The hearing was conducted at 5 o'clock by Superintendent of Streets James Donovan, in the latter's office.

This photograph was taken specially for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Dartmouth's giant football players have only been scored upon once this year. Holy Cross making a goal from the field. In the seven games played the Hanover boys ran up a total of 116 points. They are not quite so heavy as last year, but they can well hold their own on the weight question.

dium with an 11 to 0 victory over Harvard. To repeat that victory today is the hope of every Dartmouth man, and among the entire Hanover squad at the College Square Hotel this morning the utmost confidence prevailed, that this afternoon would mark another Dartmouth victory over the Cambridge men.

The Harvard team is on edge. Dartmouth is confident of winning, but it is not on with the Cambridge supporters. Can we win? has been the question in the minds of the Harvard men ever since the red and blue walked off with the victory, which had been so confidently predicted for Harvard. Pennsylvania had a stronger team than anyone thought, while Harvard players did more poorly than anyone expected.

When the true strength of the teams was shown Harvard men began to ask themselves if Dartmouth would walk off with the triumph of last season's game. Harvard failed to win Penn and Dartmouth refused to go down to defeat in any team that she has met so far this season. Harvard men wondered whether after all they had a team even good enough to win.

HARVARD WANTS REVENGE.
To lose again to the winners of the game and white would be the cause of grief for the Cambridge institution still fresh the blow of last season's defeat. The morning Dartmouth players, students and graduates, began to get into town, and every one of them had better to look at the team which only a few days ago had been so confidently predicted to be beaten by the Cambridge men.

CRIMSON ARE FIT.
As for condition, the Harvard men are fit as their feet from the New Hampshire team. Every man, according to Jack Matthews, is in excellent trim, and in case they are beaten it will not be on account of lack of condition.

LONG HAVES PREFERRED.
The team sent by a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN, Head Coach Polson said that he hoped that Harvard would agree to play thirty-five minutes longer, but he was willing to let the Cambridge boys have a five-minute period.

PARKER THREW JAP.
Professor Uchida and several Japanese students gave an exhibition of Judo at the Young Men's Christian Union after a large gathering at which Prof. Parker, who is a member of the Cambridge team, was present. The latter, according to the match-commissioner, the latter scoring five points.

YALE LOOKS FOR SMALL SCORE TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.
YALE FIELD, New Haven, Nov. 5.—Yale did not expect to run up a large score in the last match of the season. In the annual game in the last match of the season before the championship Princeton and Harvard battled for several weeks. Several of the Yale players are suffering from injuries which will be felt in the game. The Yale players have had the coaches to be directed and to be kept the largest team out of the Yale game. Brown, too, has the merit of being remarkably strong, having been beaten by the University of Pennsylvania, the champion of Harvard, only 6 to 0, and the Anier, who won, 12 to 0, from Columbia, in a 4 to 0 score. On the basis of comparison, Yale is expected to have a better team than Harvard and than Columbia.

Subs in the Line.
Yale's tackle, the veteran Bill Bloomer, took no chances with his battered shoulder today and saw the game from the bench. Jim Rhoads, the senior, taking his place. Jack Owens and Frank McVey, the fullbacks, and Henry Moore and Paul Yeeder, backs, were also kept out of the game through the direction of the coaches. And from Rhoads, who was sent in at left end, jumped badly because of a simple bruise on his leg. A kicking game was expected because Tipton was sent in at left tackle. Yale has not played Brown for two years. She won, in 1898, in the last game. Yale and Brown have been playing a game with each other since 1892. Brown has never won, although they played a game in 1892, in 1893, in 1894, in 1895, in 1896, in 1897, in 1898, in 1899, in 1900, in 1901, in 1902, in 1903, in 1904, in 1905, in 1906, in 1907, in And her husband.

"If he would make the trouble to study the woman's wishes, they would see that a proper woman's dress constitutes a whole code of its signals by which she always to him when it is safe to approach, and when it is not; it is the part of a woman's femininity. One of the trouble a married man might save himself if when he sees an unpleasant communication to make to his wife, he would choose the psychological moment when she is making a dress, not being conscious, and is consequently at a most neutral and forgiving mood, instead of hurrying it out when she has on her mind some very stormy signal which is lying out for rough and squally weather."

"What a different answer many a fortune teller might get if, instead of proposing to his lady love to be forthcoming when she has on her tailor-made dress and feels about the take care of herself and carry her own latch key, he would wait until she has changed into the frizziness and perirkability of her children suggest to her that it is not good for women to be late and to be late to pay for her own frills."

"The knowledge of woman's dress is an expensive branch of masculine education, specially for married men, but it is worth the cost."

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 5, 1904.

Organized Labor and Congressional Candidates

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in conjunction with other labor organizations, is putting two pointed questions to candidates for Congress throughout the country.

Question No. 1 is this:

If elected will you use your influence and vote toward securing the passage of a law which, during strikes and trade disputes between employer and employee engaged in interstate commerce, will give those engaged therein the right to do in combination such acts as would not be punishable as a crime if committed by one person, and forbid the issuance by Federal judges of restraining orders and injunctions restraining such combinations and acts?

The writ of injunction is a necessary and valuable part of the machinery of justice, but that it has been scandalously used in the interest of capital and against labor is notorious. Subservient judges have forbidden workmen to do many things which every American citizen, every free man, has a right to do, and disobedience of these ukases from the bench has been punished with fine and imprisonment without trial by jury. Injunctions against speaking to strike breakers for the purpose of persuading them not to war upon the common interests of labor; injunctions against contributions for the support of strikers; injunctions against making peaceful use of the public streets when strikes are on—these are a few among the glaring abuses of the writ of which Federal judges have been guilty. In essence they are a denial of the right of labor to organize for its protection and advantage, and an assertion of power on the part of the judiciary that if tolerated will be destructive of liberty.

Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, when Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, delivered an opinion which is in entire accord with the stand taken by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. He said among other sound and sharp things:

It cannot be said, I think, that two men walking up and down a sidewalk and speaking to those who enter a certain shop do necessarily and always thereby engage a threat of violence.

There is a notion which lately has been insisted on a good deal that for a COMBINATION of persons to do what any one of them lawfully might do himself will make the otherwise lawful conduct unlawful. Free competition means COMBINATION, and the organization of the world now going on so fast means an ever increasing might and scope of COMBINATION. It seems to me futile to set our faces against this tendency.

It must be true that when COMBINED they outnumbered him the case liberty that COMBINED CAPITAL has to support their interests by argument, persuasion and the bestial or refusal of those advantages which they otherwise lawfully control so long as they do no violence or threaten no violence.

That is plain good sense. American good sense, and it hits straight at government by injunction, at the growing practice of substituting the will of a judge for the Constitution and the laws.

The second question put to candidates for Congress follows:

Will you use your influence and vote toward securing the passage of a law which will make railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce liable to their employees for injuries received as a result of the negligence or mismanagement of their officers, agents or employees?

What reason can be presented why railroad companies should not be so liable? Proper corporate financial responsibility for negligence and mismanagement would greatly reduce the horrible annual lists of killed and mangled among railroad workers.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the other labor organizations have joined them in putting these queries to Congressional candidates know exactly what they want, and they have gone about getting what they want in the right way. That is, they have "gone into politics," which is what all Americans citizens should do when they are suffering under wrongs that legislation can remedy.

No man nominated for the House of Representatives, whether he be a Democrat or Republican, who will not answer "yes" to the questions of the Railroad Trainmen and the labor organizations associated with them, deserves to be elected.

Don't Kill Poor Santa Claus

He is Hamilton and Dies a Great Deal of Good

A number of very good and very well meaning women decided some years ago that the story of Santa Claus was a wicked fiction, and should never again be told to little children.

Every year they begin a crusade against the old gentleman with the long white whiskers and the sleigh. This year they have begun a little earlier than usual, hoping to head him off before his arrival is too generally expected among his small admirers.

While the ground taken by these women is very high and noble, we hope devoutly that they will never be successful in their mission.

The fable about Santa Claus is certainly harmless. No child is ever made a liar because he discovers that his parents deceived him about Santa Claus.

He is merely entertained from the time when he first begins to think about things to the stage of his childhood when he discovers, by shrewd questions, that Mr. Santa Claus is only a myth.

And all the while his IMAGINATION, which is a very important part of his mental makeup, is being stimulated.

He will sit for hours thinking about the coming of the good old fellow with his big bundle of toys, and picture to himself all the details of the reindeer, the sleigh and the difficult and perilous journey down the chimney.

And as the routine of action will later develop his mind and teach him to think for himself, so this fable, occasioning thoughts and dreams that gradually in-train channels.

Of course, the story of Santa Claus is a lie. So are the fables of Hans Christian Andersen and Grimm; yet nobody thinks of telling a child who is listening to one of them that they are not true.

To do so would be instantly to kill his interest in them, and see him wandering wonderingly whether there is really truth in the world after all.

If you have children of your own, you will find that they do a good deal of thinking about this Santa Claus story, that the thinking only results in giving them a keen interest in other stories when they grow older.

And although so sympathetic with the women who are seeking to destroy the white-haired old friend, we yet rejoice when we find that thus far their efforts to banish him have met with not a particle of success.

IN JUNGLE SOCIETY

"What makes the elephant so proud?" "What don't you know? He's got to be so prominent that the papers are publishing cartoons of him every day."

"Look! There comes a stick of dynamite through the transom."

Don't you know that every healthy child ought to be taught the manners and customs of its forefathers, especially upon such a night as this?

Come here, Willie. Now you run right out this evening and take your sister with you, and do anything you see the other children doing. Don't be afraid, but go and have a good time. I shall expect you to stay out until 11 o'clock and then I want you to come straight in the house.

Mamma and I will wait for you. Come soon, Mrs. Martyn. What was that that fell against the front door? Listen! I hear burglars on the roof. Wait a minute and I'll run up and see.

Mr. Martyn, come up here at once! Some one has dumped a scuttle of ashes down the chimney, and the next thing we know the furnace fire will be blazing out in the cellar.

Listen! Didn't you hear glass crashing in the kitchen? Oh, yes, I did. I'll go out and see what the matter is. I always have to go to the kitchen to see what Mrs. Martyn and look. Three times broken. Some one has thrown broken glass through them.

There goes the glass in the dining-room. Something is falling on the roof of the porch. Look! There comes a stick of dynamite through the transom in the front hall. Why don't you find out where those young ruffians are, Mrs. Martyn, and drive them away!

It's 11 o'clock. I wonder where the children are? I'll just stop out on the front porch with my gun.

Willie, you little devil, what are you going to do with the scuttle of ashes? But in the front door with it? No, you aren't. Is it you and your sister who have been rioting around here like an attacking party of Japanese?

"Come in here and see upstairs. I'll attend to you later."

"Halloween! The idea! Never mention Halloween to me again—any of you."
